TAXIMETER IN ANCIENT ROME IS UNEARTHED

ROME, June 25.—The old biblical maxim that there is nothing new under the sun is once more proven by a passage in the works of Vitruvius, the great architect of the first century before Christ. It appears that even the taximeter was known to the Romans, together with the lift and open plumbing. Vitruvius says that in ancient Rome there were cab stations. The horse chariots were furnished with a device which dropped into a box small, white ball every thousand steps, and that the cost was figured by counting the number of balls thus released.

In the strict sense, France did not refuse 30,000,000,000 gold marks; she merely refused the promise of 30,000,000,000 gold marks — Dallas News.

SLAYS GUARDIAN OF LOVERS' LANE

Woman Samaritan Found Dead, Man is Sought

CHICAGO, June 25.—A theory of revenge was advanced today by police seeking the slayer of Mrs. Mary Lawrence, 37, known as the "guardian of Lovers' Lane."

Mrs. Lawrence was found mysteriously shot to death in her home on Harlan avenue, a wooded thoroughfare just outside the northwest city limits. Ethel, 15, her daughter, and John Prangle, a boy friend, found her seated in a chair as if asleep, a bullet wound in her head.

Harlan avenue, because of its rustic seclusion, is known to autoists as "Lovers' Lane." Mrs. Lawrence had many times rescued young girls from cars parked at the roadside, thus winning her title as the popular driver's guardian.

Discarding a theory of suicide, county and city police are searching for a man they believe killed her because of her interference in such an episode.

TICKET SELLER TO SUNDAY DANCE HELD

TOPERA, June 25.—In Reno, Kan., you can't pay the price and dance on Sunday.

Attorney General C. G. Griffith today was notified by the sheriff of Leavenworth county that yesterday he stopped a dance that was being held at Reno, and that he arrested the man who was selling tickets to the dance.

The attorney general will probably be asked to make a ruling on Sunday dancing.

Sell Land to Peasants; Solve Labor Problem

JACKSON, Miss., June 25.—Forty-eighty acre tracts of the world's finest cotton lands are to be offered to European peasants on long-term notes by business men of Greenwood, in the heart of the long staple cotton belt of the United States.

S. M. Doti, business man of Greenwood suggested the plan, which was endorsed by the planters and merchants of that city at a mass meeting. He is to go to northern Europe this summer and sell the land to the farmers and arrange for their transportation to the delta region.

Expenses of the plan, about $30,000 are to be borne by Greenwood business men, and will be raised at a meeting to be held soon.

Greenwood is in the heart of the negro belt of Mississippi and planters have been seriously handicapped by the labor shortage, resulting from negro exodus to the north. They believe the Port plan will relieve the labor shortage.

Legion Essay Contest Is Expected to Reach

INDIANAPOLIS, June 25.—The second annual American Legion essay contest for school children throughout the country will close October 12 it was announced at Legion headquarters here today.

It was estimated by officers of the legion that 250,000 children will compete this year. The subject for the essay is: "Why America should permit all immigration for a period of five years."

The children of the nation will compete by a method of elimination. Co-operating with educational officials in every state since the legion has found it possible to have county and city school heads pass on the best composition from their schools and send them to the state committee.

There competent judges will pass on the essays and award silver and bronze medals and certificates merit to winners of first and third places in each state.

The best essay of each state will then be submitted to the national committee composed of educators of national prominence. They will consider each essay for thought, style, originality of treatment, spelling and punctuation to determine rating of contestants.

When the committee designates the winners, special awards will be made, first to receive $750, second $500, and third $250, all of which must be applied on scholarship expenses at any college or university designated by the winners.

Last year's contest, in which 50,000 entered, was won by Ah Sing, a Hawaiian youth of Chinese extraction, who is now finishing preparatory school work, Virginia Chastain, Indianapolis, was second, and Joseph Giardino, Bridgeport, Conn., who submitted his essay in blank verse, was third.

The "first bale" was rushed here by truck and train and at a cost of approximately $800.

KANSAS WANTS MEN FOR CROPS

Harvest Underway Today All Over State

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 25.—Twenty thousand hands today swing into the work of harvesting Kansas wheat crop.

The available supply of workers will be insufficient to meet immediate demands of farmers, according to belief of George E. Tucker, director of the United States Labor Bureau.

Due to heavy rains which retarded harvesting in southern sections of the state, grain throughout Kansas is ripening practically simultaneously and quick work will be needed to save the wheat from becoming overripe.

Huge binders and headers attacked acres of waving fields with prospects that the harvest will be largely taken care of in the next 10 days.

More than a thousand calls a day for harvest hands are reaching the employment office here.

Pay $800 to Send First Cotton Bale to Market

HOUSTON, June 25.—The first bale of this season's cotton which was rushed here from Westaco Saturday night was to be sold at auction on the floor of the cotton exchange to-day.

A number of Westaco citizens, including the men who grew the staple and the ginner, accompanied the "first bale" here.

The "first bale" was rushed here by truck and train and at a cost of approximately $800.

Coast-to-Coast Hikers Open Summer Season

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 25.—Movie struck girls and waitresses hunting new jobs! Hoboes and single men and floating laborers!

Those made-up the greatest number of men and women hikers given a lift by two automobile parties between the Atlantic seaboard and Columbus, William Hartnett, Washington, D. C., newspaper man, who arrived in Columbus recently, said that along the Lincoln highway there is scarcely an automobile tourist who is not informed from 10 to 20 times a day to give a ride to some man or woman hiker.

In the course of four weeks' travel, Hartnett, on his way home from the east, gave lifts to 193 hikers and passed up 400 more. Of these 75 were men and 118 were women.

Among the girls, 50 were on pleasure trips to the mountains of Colorado, or the lakes of Wisconsin and Minnesota. Most of these were either college girls, school teachers or business women. The rest of those whom Hartnett and his wife met said they were hiking to Los Angeles in the hope of getting into the movies. The others were waitresses or domestics walking to new jobs.

The Public Demanded This Sale

Just about a month ago we put over our first Aluminum Sale. At that time we determined to sell 5000 pieces in three hours. We anticipated a crowd but nothing like the turn out that came. In a great deal less than three hours we were cleaned out of Aluminum.

Many Were Unable to Attend That Sale and Asked for Another.

We have had requests for another sale every day since the last one. The fame of the wonderful values we offered has spread far and wide. Imagine it! Aluminum being sold for 98¢. And especially of such quality as this aluminum. Durable?

Did You Ever See a Two Hundred Pound Man Stand on a Piece of Aluminum Without Injuring It?

Be here tomorrow before nine and witness that demonstration. You'll say with others who saw the test before that Aluminum has to have quality to stand up under treatment like that. Select the piece you want tested and ask the demonstrator to stand on it.

Our last sale was a howling success. This one is going to be many times greater. We have 15,000 pieces for your selection. 15,000 PIECES OF THE VERY FINEST QUALITY ALUMINUM.

But get here early. There will be a crowd—no use deceiving you about that. You'll find nearly every woman in Port Arthur at this sale. Women know values—you can't fool them. And they know that Aluminum of the quality of THIS Aluminum is not to be had very often at 98¢.

Let Friend Husband cook his own breakfast. Don't let anything stand in the way of getting here. Meals can wait—dishes can wait—housework can wait, but:

A PERSONAL INSULT

A young lady in Houston became engaged last summer to one of the famous short stops of the Texas baseball league.

Last week he broke the engagement, and this is the reason why:

He had a birthday last Tuesday and she sent him a beautifully bound and illustrated edition of Coleridge's famous poem, "The Ancient Mariner."

The hero of the diamond opened the book with a puzzled look. "What's this bloomin' stuff about, anyways?" he said, and read:

"It is the Ancient Mariner."

And he stopped one of three—

The famous shortstop threw the book out the window and stuck out his chin and said:

"No Texas girl can git away from me face like dat. I swipes nine day-cutters outer ten dat comes in my garden, I do."

Charge the phosphates and soda we sell, don't you see?"

"How nice," said the fair Bessie, and they all arose.

YOU AND I

BEWILDERING
"I'm the only woman bricklayer in the country," says Mrs. Florence Thompson of Long Island City. Her husband runs a bricklaying school, so she thought she'd take a hand at it. "If I want a new hat I go out and lay brick for a couple of days, and then there will be no argument about it."

Here's a practical precedent for housewives who are always wondering how they could make a little pin money in spare time.

An old-fashioned man must feel bewildered as he wonders at the existence of a woman bricklayer and an industrial system so highly systematized that there's actually a school giving diplomas in bricklaying.

DISTANCE

Indians are rehearsing "Hiawatha," which they'll stage in August, celebrating the three-hundredth anniversary of the discovery of the "Soil" and Lake Superior by the white man.

The Ojibways marvel at Longfellow's accuracy in the matter of their Indian customs and their country. If they can get Longfellow on the ouija board, they'll tell them that he never was near said country. He got his "stuff" from an Indian chief whom he met in New York City.

However, that's one of the essentials of an expert. Peter Witt, traction expert, says an expert is a man who lives several hundred miles away and charges $100 a day for his services. A prophet (or an expert) is not without honor, etc.

FAT

We, Americans eat 14 pounds of fat a year for every man, woman and child. The press agent of a soap company figures it out. People who aren't vegetarians will say, "That's why we are such a strong, active nation."

But they won't be able to explain why the average person in Omaha eats 154 pounds of fat a year, while in Detroit—a peppery city as far as the fat figure is only 39, which is even less than Washington's—18. Our "steam" is a matter of iodine, adenalin and other chemicals secreted by our endocrine glands, and climate seems to vary the secretion.

GOODBYE

Famous old Elms Hotel, tavern opened in 1771, goes out of business in Sturbridge, Mass. "Prohibition hit us," explains the genial host, John Hubbard.

No places like Delmonico's are not the only ones that are ceasing to exist. Jails, insane asylums and the penitentiaries also report falling off in business.

CHILDREN

Things are far from perfect, but we're making some good progress, at least. Twenty-two states now have laws compelling physical examination of every child applying for an enrollment certificate. The strictest laws to date appear to be in Virginia, where parents with child labor prohibited, will confer with our school boards in providing for compulsory education of all.

LETTERS FROM LESLIE PRESS CONTINUE

Henry Ford, the political man of mystery, paid a flying visit to the city of New York. Business over he made almost a flying run or return trip to the city of Detroit. A great American newspaper, published on Manhattan Island, carried a front page story that was startling, to say the least. An enterprising member of its staff had made the discovery that the political man of mystery was about to abandon his Michigan home to get support from New York democrats in a campaign for the presidential nomination.

And there are publishers in the city of New York who look upon this species of journalism as progressive as well as spectacular. Henry Ford said at the time of his famous libel suit in which the Chicago Tribune was defendant, that history was bunk. Perhaps he had in mind journalistic history. If the political man of mystery is on his way to the White House why should he use a stop-over in the city of New York?

He is a product of the west. His vast plants are in the west. He accumulated his huge fortune in the west. And he is the only westerner, the only American for that matter, who ever had the nerve to risk bout with the financiers of Wall Street and then win the decision. Henry Ford knows, if he knows anything, that Wall Street is not for him and never would be for him. This would hold good if he made his way to the White House.

Henry Ford knows, if he knows anything, that the political masters of the state of New York are not his friends and never will be his friends. For him, now and forever, the American metropolis will be the enemies' country. There are many reasons why. A reader of the Dearborn Independent need not be told some of the reasons.

The political man of mystery may have millions of admirers. He may be the financial wonder of America. He certainly is the ninth wonder of the world from many points of view but as he has come down the broad open highway he has made enemies and enemies who never forget. There is nothing remarkable about this. Any man who climbs out of the ruts to a place of eminence should expect the arrows to be shot in his back from those below.

Twenty-four years ago Henry Ford was an unknown. He did not have the price of a third-hand car. Now, he is the richest man in America, he has more ready cash than any man in the world and has more business activities to his credit than any ten men.

He is the publisher of a newspaper. That newspaper from time to time printed some very pointed articles. Henry Ford inspired them. He not only inspired but he assumed responsibility for them. Why shouldn't he have enemies? A man without enemies is a man without friends. And a man's enemies have more to do with his success than his friends. Enemies keep a man from going to sleep at the switch. Enemies make known his weak points. They point out the defects of his character or his program. They keep him on the alert. They keep him guessing. They keep him moving. They compel him to put forth his very best efforts.

Friends never do these things. Really a man should thank the Lord for the enemies he has made. Without enemies he might fall from his high place and return to the ruts where he found himself.

During the past 44 years there have been 13 periods of prosperity and 12 intervening periods of depression in the United States. Knowledge of this led the officials of one of the leading banks of America to make a survey and on the survey this verdict was returned "Careful computations made by this bank show that after allowance has been made for the increase in population the present rates of production are well above the customary rates of consumption." Is this where the shoe pinches?

CHURCH

The tide is turning, and Europeans are coming back to the churches, reports Prof. K. H. Roessingh of Leyden, Holland. This comes after an epidemic of despair and religious doubt—reaction from the war and its misery.

The swing back to the church in Europe is the kind of reconstruction that counts most. For Europe's real troubles and problems are spiritual.

HOME

The home is the least efficient of our social institutions, charges Prof. Ernest R. Groves of Boston University College of Liberal Arts. He says the home lags behind the school and church because it has not made use of science. "There are parents who prepare themselves more seriously for the raising of poultry than for the bringing up of their own children."

It is easy to start an argument about anything. And there are ways of proving that black is white. But to claim that the average home is less efficient than, for instance, schools, is too much. Home, managed by mothers, is the MOST successful of social institutions.

CRIME

The former head of Scotland Yard detectives, Sir Basil Thomson, toured our country recently. Back in London, he blames our crime waves on uncertain and feeble working of our laws (loopholes and too much elasticity) rather than on courts or police. He also thinks we do not have enough cops.

Is it possible that our laws, except where free speech or property rights are concerned, are too democratic? We are so strict with the rabbits that we overlook the wolves.

ICE

Another ice age coming in which a gigantic glacier will creep down from the north pole toward the equator? Quite possible, according to some scientists who have studied the growth of northern glaciers in the last 70 years.

The MacMillan arctic expedition has, as one of its main purposes, investigated the possibility of another ice age. If such a catastrophe came, how quickly nations and individuals would stop warring against and robbing each other! In the presence of common danger, we quickly unite for the common good. You see this illustrated in disasters such as floods and fires that destroy cities.

Why don't we co-operate without waiting for nature to send calamities to bring us to our senses?

DULL

If your job seems monotonous and dull, think of E. P. Smith of the Old Colony Trust company in Boston. He signs his name 350,000 times a year on checks, etc. A machine, holding five pens, enables him to sign five at a time. But that still necessitates 70,000 signatures a year. And if it's as boresome as when teacher used to make us stay after school and write the same thing over and over again on the blackboard, Smith deserves a medal. Yet his job is the kind that standardization and mass production, and "efficiency" are bringing all humanity towards steadily. We are walling ourselves in a frightful prison.

would not allow anyone, not even her, to say anything about me.

Just as soon as he comes home tonight, mother, you him for me and tell him he is the best ever, won't you?

Don't you think my apartment is lovely? I think that I will come home tomorrow and help you enjoy it if in the meantime this old woman here does not think up some other way to keep me here and make me feel uncomfortable.

She keeps no maids, but she will not let me help her dear Priscilla do anything. Seems to think I am not capable of it and I'll tell the world that "dear Priscilla" is in no

At this that spinster stepped forward and remarked with more or less rancor, "I am sure, Mrs. Presscott, that had you seen Mr. Prescott's mother night before last you would have though she was going to die."

"What was the nature of her illness?" I inquired.

Thereupon the old lady broke down and sobbed as she said, "John has broken my heart. John has broken my heart."

If looks could have killed, I would have been a corpse then and there from "dear Priscilla's" glances.

I must have looked somewhat surprised for she thrust a letter into my hand which it seems John had written to his mother, in which he had told her some wholesome truths.

It seemed that backbiting Priscilla Bradford had seen me that night at the Frolic with Kael and she wrote full particulars, as she saw it, to mother-in-law.

I am going to call Jack up tonight and talk to him. On what he says will depend whether I start home tomorrow or not.

Lovingly, LESLIE.

Though the warm days have brought out numbers of chiffons, georgettes in both plain and printed effects, one sees an al quantity of long-sleeved silk gowns in navy and black, lace trimmings, the plain chiffon frock, lace panels and a finish for the short-capped sleeves.

$25,250,000 Worth Are Lying Around Somewhere

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Some in this country, a king's ransom is lying neglected and perhaps unnoticed. Parts of it may long ago have been swept into scrap heaps.

It consists of $25,250,000 worth of matured government securities which have never been presented for redemption and on which interest payments long ago were stopped.

Year after year, treasury department clerks transfer from book to book the records of this huge sum of bonds which should have been turned in for cash many years ago.

From time to time some of the missing securities find their way back to the treasury from long unopened strong boxes, caches in stockings and vases, or dusty bureau drawers and are stricken from the books, but they are few.

The bonds which each succeeding political generation in the treasury houses to see redeemed are as follows:

Funded loan of 1891, continued, $1,000.

Funded loan, 1891, matured in 1891, $10,500.

Loan of 1904, $13,050.

Funded loan of 1907, $371,000.

Refunding certificates of 1907, $10,270.

Old debt matured since 1861, $502,720.

Various matured certificates of indebtedness, $9,003,000.

Loan of 1908-1918, $326,040.

Victory Loan of 1922-23, $11,400.

So "Scotty" is bound north to British Columbia, up where it is cooler and where the chances for bringing out a "stake" are just as good, he believes, as the valley which gave him his nickname.

"Scotty" still has his claims in Death Valley, but admits that the heat there is more than he can stand now. He bears seven bullet wounds as the result of different scraps with bandits. Some of the bullets have never been removed from his body, and those, he admits, bother him at times.

Mack Leach Drops Toggery Shop Nine With Shutout Sunday

Elks Put Crimp In Visitors Record By Copping Game 2-0

Jimmy Bell and Ray Jordan Future Clash With Opportunity Hits and Sensational Catches That Bring Locals Out on Top

By BILL ARCHER

IT TOOK the Port Arthur Elks to put a crimp in the Toggery Shop's winning streak.

With a ball too fast for them to fathom, Mack Leach shut out the fastest semi-pro nine from Beaumont on Lake Shore diamond yesterday afternoon before the largest crowd of the season, and the local Elks copped the game 2 to 0.

With the score 1 to 0 in the last of the eighth, Jimmy Bell, well-known catcher of the locals, clouted out a neat single that bounded over the Toggery Shop's second baseman's head by inches, scoring Fulbright, and it was a ball game.

Airtight fielding and sensational execution of the ball received the visitors, undefeated before their advent into Port Arthur in the good old fashioned way: "Three up, three down."

Ray Jordan, left-fielder of the locals, tied with J. Jordan, centerfielder of the visitors for fielding honors, and made one of the most sensational one-handed stabs of the game when, after a running spur, he jumped high into the air and robbed Vance of a long hit.

That ended the ball game. Leach hurled decidedly the best game of baseball Lakeshore fans have witnessed this season, and although the Toggery Shop boys got to his offerings for eight bobbles, the Elk's speed demon kept them well scattered, pitched an unfathomable pill in the pinches and squirmed out of holes that made the game more lively. Leach struck out 5 of those who faced him and issued two passes to first, while Charlie Hall, opposing moundman, granted no walks and was credited with but three strikeouts.

Opportune hits on the part of the Elks decided the issue. Ray Jordan finding a heat drive in the last of the fourth that brought in the first earned tally, while Bell chased the jolt off his slugging stick in the final half of the eighth to put the game over with a drive that took the hop over Boone's head, too high by inches for him to handle, and sending "Doc" Fulbright across the counting ruber for the second score.

For four frames both squads went at each other like mad demons of the diamond, and it seemed that neither would gain an edge. Fandom had just settled itself to witness a 0-0 baseball game when Romero came to bat in the last of the fourth. Romero drew down a single, and took second when Curt Smith sacrificed. Hopkins to Boone, Morgan looked the offerings of Charlie Hall over and connected for a single, romped the second one over, popping it through short and gaining first while Romero was sprinting for the fourth plate to bring in a run. Jordan, overrunning first and returning on a sprint, was caught in a run down and thrown out at second. Vance to Boone, retiring the Elks.

It was enough to win for them, but the Elks were overzealous yesterday; twice in a row they had tasted defeat at the hands of good semi-pro clubs, and yesterday they were facing one that, like Orange's Diamonds, had not been defeated this season. So Skipper Cliff Gunn's protest tore into the visiting machine with apparent full intent of annihilating them from the diamond.

Jimmy Bell, Curt Smith and Ray Jordan all had a good day on the field. Bell was perhaps the deciding factor of the game with his safe single that bounded over Boone's head, while to the credit of Jordan goes the honor of having started the winning rally.

The hitting of "Doc" Fulbright brought an added feature into the game. Fulbright, in three trips to the plate, connected for three safeties, and crossed the bag for the winning run in the last of the eighth on Bell's single. Leach clouted the offerings of Hall consistently all through the game.

Romero played an airtight game at second base, and made several sensational stops of balls that were hard hit and almost impossible to knock down. "Hony" stalled a hot one just off the ground in the last frame that made the second out of the stanza and added to the Elk's chances for victory.

Skipper Gunn indicated yesterday afternoon that in all probabilities he will bring the Toggery Shop nine back here next Sunday for another clash. Fandom would welcome another occasion of witnessing the kind of baseball they put out, and if they do, another airtight battle is in store for Port Arthur.

The crowd yesterday, although larger than has been in evidence this season, was unusually orderly, and aided the locals in their efforts by staying off the field. Throughout the game the rosters stood a good 45 feet off the foul lines, and gave every man a safe opportunity to execute his swing.

Ray Jordan finding a heat drive in the last of the fourth that brought in the first earned tally, while Bell chased the jolt off his slugging stick in the final half of the eighth to put the game over with a drive that took the hop over Boone's head, too high by inches for him to handle, and sending "Doc" Fulbright across the counting ruber for the second score.

For four frames both squads went at each other like mad demons of the diamond, and it seemed that neither would gain an edge. Fandom had just settled itself to witness a 0-0 baseball game when Romero came to bat in the last of the fourth. Romero drew down a single, and took second when Curt Smith sacrificed. Hopkins to Boone, Morgan looked the offerings of Charlie Hall over and connected for a single, romped the second one over, popping it through short and gaining first while Romero was sprinting for the fourth plate to bring in a run. Jordan, overrunning first and returning on a sprint, was caught in a run down and thrown out at second. Vance to Boone, retiring the Elks.

It was enough to win for them, but the Elks were overzealous yesterday; twice in a row they had tasted defeat at the hands of good semi-pro clubs, and yesterday they were facing one that, like Orange's Diamonds, had not been defeated this season. So Skipper Cliff Gunn's protest tore into the visiting machine with apparent full intent of annihilating them from the diamond.

Jimmy Bell, Curt Smith and Ray Jordan all had a good day on the field. Bell was perhaps the deciding factor of the game with his safe single that bounded over Boone's head, while to the credit of Jordan goes the honor of having started the winning rally.

The hitting of "Doc" Fulbright brought an added feature into the game. Fulbright, in three trips to the plate, connected for three safeties, and crossed the bag for the winning run in the last of the eighth on Bell's single. Leach clouted the offerings of Hall consistently all through the game.

Romero played an airtight game at second base, and made several sensational stops of balls that were hard hit and almost impossible to knock down. "Hony" stalled a hot one just off the ground in the last frame that made the second out of the stanza and added to the Elk's chances for victory.

Opposite hits on the part of the Elks decided the issue. Ray Jordan finding a heat drive in the last of the fourth that brought in the first earned tally, while Bell chased the jolt off his slugging stick in the final half of the eighth to put the game over with a drive that took the hop over Boone's head, too high by inches for him to handle, and sending "Doc" Fulbright across the counting ruber for the second score.
